Helpful Hint
Form a study group! If your note taking skills really are subpar, it’s a great idea to partner up with a classmate who has got this skill down. In exchange, offer to help transfer his or her notes to flash cards or to take on another part of a group project. Study groups can also help you study more efficiently—dividing and conquering a chapter outline, for example, can help all of you prepare.

Every three years, the University of Arizona is given the honor to nominate 3 students to become the next Student Regent.
